

1. What did you like about the paper?
2. What did you have questions about?
3. Suggestions for revision:
 - a. audience concerns
 - b. organization/coherence
 - c. interest factor
 - d. surface revision

Responses.

#1

1. Understand your complaints. I hate them as well.
2. More examples needed.
3.
 - a. Everyone understands you're complaining.
 - b. Good organization.
 - c. Interesting, I can relate.
 - d. Check grammar.

#2

Good job, effective and real. This will be taken seriously by the university. You need to fix mechanics and that will allow your teacher to better read your info. Good conclusion. Your attention getter in the beginning is good also.
--check organization of paragraphs.
--fix mechanics

#3

1. I liked your subject matter. I liked your story about your friend, I think that was effective.
2. I'm wondering about why staff acts this way--do they have to? Why are the policies like they are?
3.
 - a. You seem to keep changing who you're writing to. Sometimes it's other residents, sometimes the staff, and sometimes the resident hall director and higher ups.
 - b. I think you've written your conclusion twice. You may want to combine the last couple of paragraphs. Also, the first couple of paragraphs seem confused--where you make your argument in the first and then make kind of a different one in the second.
 - c. I think the most interesting part is the story about your friend.
 - d. You repeat things a lot--words, ideas, etc. You probably should root those out, it seems to me. Also some of your subjects and verbs don't agree, and you keep referring to people as "that."