

FINANCE

FOCUS ON FINANCE

Businesses, both large and small, must learn to make good financial choices in order to prosper. Since a career in finance is about making and managing money, a bachelor's degree in finance equips you with the necessary skills to assist businesses, institutions and individuals in their financial decision making.

As a USI Romain College of Business finance major, you will focus on the monetary issues faced by millions of individuals and organizations in the public, nonprofit and private sectors. You will evaluate current and historical data, analyze financial or economic trends and forecast how to profit from them. Coursework in finance addresses a diverse range of issues, including financial analysis, investments, risk and valuation. Learning how money works and when to utilize the various financial tools available, gives you the foundation needed to be a sought-after candidate in this exciting field.
